au loongyu

actually like some others i am quite lucky, cos before we got released the police merely said that they reserve the right to prosecute us, unlike those student leaders who got charged right away and quite a number of them not yet released.

yes i think it is a great idea for any of you to alert more people outside China about the resistance in HK and mainland. Just as in 1989 when the democracy movement broke out and then got repressed brutally, for those who thought china was "socialist" , quite a few of them argued that the movement was sponsored by imperialist and therefore crackdown is a socialist crackdown on counter revolution. This was the line of the Philipinno CP. I wonder if there are eventually crackdown on HK democractic movment here the same kind of silly political mistake may lead people like them to argue the same thing?

so i think your idea is good.
